Oh, my aching neck...

The neck is a pretty common place to experience pain. That's because your neck is the most mobile part of the spine — so injuries and painful conditions are more likely to occur there. If you are suffering from neck pain, you should see a health professional about it.

To prevent neck pain and injury, follow these tips:

- Maintain proper posture. Use a chair that is appropriate, stable and the right height. Use a table that is also the right height to avoid neck strain. Change your position periodically, so that exhaustion and pain will not occur. Avoid twisting your neck suddenly. When you are standing, maintain a relaxed neck, with your head upright and your chin retracted. You'll also want to get the right size pillow. A pillow should support your neck in a balanced position.
- Exercise your neck regularly to maintain and improve flexibility. Take a break from whatever you do during the day, about every half hour. Stretch your neck in different directions by looking up, down, to the right and to the left. Another good way to exercise this area is to raise and squeeze your shoulders together and then relax. Repeat this a few times.

Could I have my dressing on the side, please?

Trying to live a healthy lifestyle takes some practice— especially when it comes to eating a better diet. If you are trying to count calories or limit your fat intake, here are a few pointers for dining in or out:

- Watch the sauce. Pay attention to the amount of salad dressings or other sauces you use. Order condiments on the side and add small amounts at a time so that you are in control.
- Hold the mayo. Instead, use spices, herbs and mustards for taste.
- Get steamed. Make or order foods that are baked, grilled, poached or steamed, rather than fried.
- Make it veggie. Dishes that contain lots of veggies or fruits are usually lower in calories and fat.
- Get a doggie bag first. Before you dig in, scrape some of that mega-portion into a doggie bag.
- Mix it up. One of the healthiest ways to eat is to include variety, moderation and balance. — adapted from the National Restaurant Association Web site

What would you do?

You are one of two people on a malfunctioning airplane with only one parachute. How would you react?

- Pessimist: You refuse the parachute because you might die on the jump anyway.
- Optimist: You refuse the parachute because people have survived crashes just like this before.
- Procrastinator: You play a game of Monopoly for the parachute.
- Bureaucrat: You order them to conduct a feasibility study on parachute use in multi-engine aircraft under code red conditions.
- Lawyer: You charge one parachute for helping them sue the airline.
- Internal Revenue Service: you confiscate the parachute along with their luggage, wallet, and gold fillings.
- Advertiser: You strip-tease while singing that what they need is a neon parachute with computer altimeter for only $39.99.
- Engineer: You make them another parachute out of aisle curtains and dental floss.
- Scientist: You give them the parachute and ask them to send you a report on how well it worked.
- Mathematician: You refuse to accept the parachute without proof that it will work in all cases.
- Philosopher: You ask how they know the parachute actually exists.
- English major: You explicate simile and metaphor in the parachute instructions.
- Comparative Literature student: You read the parachute instructions in all four languages.
- Psychoanalyst: You ask them what the shape of a parachute reminds them of.
- Actor: You tie them down so they can watch you develop the character of a person stuck on a falling plane without a parachute.
- Artist: You hang the parachute on the wall and sign it.
- National Rifle Association member: You shoot them and take the parachute.
- Environmentalist: You refuse to use the parachute unless it is biodegradable.
- Auto Mechanic: As long as you are looking at the plane engine, it works fine.
- Tobacco Grower: You explain very patiently that despite a number of remarkable coincidences, studies have shown no link whatsoever between airplane crashes and death.

People get their eyes tested and their teeth checked on a regular basis,

Why Not Look After Your Ears Too?

Hearing changes often do not result in an overall loss of volume. Some sounds remain as audible as they always were, yet others become harder to hear, and some conversations require more attentiveness. You might notice that words just don't sound clear.

If you suspect that your hearing may be changing, it's up to you to be alert to the signs and have your hearing tested by a qualified professional.

Need to clean — go green

If you feel like you're spending too much money on store-bought cleaners, maybe you should try making some of your own. Sound complicated? It's not. You can make homemade cleaners easily, and you won't have to worry about the toxins that are part of so many store-bought cleaning products.

Most homemade cleaners can be made from things that are readily available in households, or at least in your local grocery store. You might be impressed with the results of your cleansers. Here is a list of basic ingredients that will help get you started:

- Baking soda
- Vinegar
- Water
- Lemon juice
- Ammonia
- Salt
- Vegetable or olive oil
- Club soda
- Isopropyl alcohol
- Toothpaste
- Spray bottles

When you make your own cleansers, mix them in a well ventilated area. Label all containers and store them safely. Don't reuse old containers from other cleaners. And remember, never mix bleach and ammonia. Spot test your cleanser before you use it.

Club soda does a wonderful job of cleaning linoleum floors. And vinegar added to the rinse cycle works as a fabric softener. Toothpaste is a great chrome cleaner.

Here are a couple of recipes:

Glass Cleaner

- 1 gallon water
- 1/2 cup white vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon liquid dishwashing detergent

Furniture polish

- 1 cup vegetable or olive oil
- 1/2 cup lemon juice —adapted from “Homemade cleaners: How to make all-natural green cleaners,” by Sara Noel, on the Sideroad Web site

On failure

If at first you don't succeed, destroy all evidence that you tried.

How a little imagination changed the way we shop

A little story about imagination.

Before supermarkets existed as we know them, going to the grocery store used to be a totally different experience. In the old days, customers walked in and told a clerk what they wanted. Then the clerk set to the task of compiling the order for the customer.

Clarence Saunders made his living as a grocery store clerk in a small Southern town. He had never made more than $20 a week.

One day he stood in line at a cafeteria carrying a tray, waiting to select his food. Clarence Saunders had always seemed like an ordinary man — nothing in him so far had indicated that he had any unusual abilities.

But that day, as he stood in line, something happened. In his mind two ideas collided. His imagination took off and he took the “self-help” idea of the cafeteria and applied it to a grocery store — and thus was born the Piggly-Wiggly chain of grocery stores.

Clarence Saunders, the $20 a week clerk became a millionaire. And grocery shopping was forever changed. — adapted from The Law of Success in Sixteen Lessons, by Napoleon Hill

An unexpected conversation

A class of MBA students took a field trip away from their university. On the bus ride on the way back to the school after the trip, the driver pulled over at a rest stop. Most of the MBA candidates had been partying heavily the night before. One first year student, headed for the first stall in the restroom.

As soon as he entered the stall, the man in the next stall said, “Hi, there. How’s it going?”

The first-year student thought it was odd that the man in the next stall wanted to start a conversation, but he thought, “Who knows, this guy might be one of the facilitators at school, one who might be giving me a grade in the near future.”

He felt silly talking through the stall wall, but he answered, “Not bad.”

Then the man in the next stall said, “What are you doing?”

The intimidated student answered, “Well, we’re all headed back to school from the field trip, right?”

To which the man in the next stall said, “Look. I’ll have to call you back. Every time I say something, some genius in the next stall keeps answering me.
