What some would view as obstacles can serve as great inspiration in life

Imagine being 12 years old and being blinded by a degenerative eye disease. That's exactly the situation that German-born Sabriye Tenberken faced, but the young woman has not let the fact that she is blind hold her back in life. To the contrary, she has used her personal experience to reach out to others across the globe by starting an organization called Braille Without Borders with her boyfriend, Paul Kronenberg.

According to a story on the Rugged Elegance Web site and the New York Times profile: "A German Voyager's Bold Vision for Tibet's Blind" by Jim Yardley, Tenberken went on a mission to Tibet to become one of "the blind leading the blind." There she set up the first school in the country for the blind. Tenberken, now in her 30s, says she wants to help blind people in developing countries, who are often considered out-casts, to shed their shame and gain confidence.

Tenberken says she faced a lot of naysayers when she was making her plans for Tibet. A lot of people didn't think she could do it. But the young woman, not only went to the country and started its first blind school, she also traveled on horseback to small villages, and created the first Tibetan Braille system.

In Tibet, blind children have often been relegated to dark rooms or tied to beds. But Tenberken inspired many of the families she visited, giving them hope that their children could not just survive, but could thrive independently.

Tenberken hasn't stopped there either. She now is in the process of launching an international training center in South India. There she hopes to train blind people from all over the world, especially from developing countries. She wants to help them develop management skills and communication skills to help fight poverty and do something meaningful for society. Tenberken has a goal: to touch the lives of the 161 million blind people of the world.

Tenberken told the NYT, that blind children would never be able to drive a truck. "But they can read and write in the dark," she said. "And who can do that?"

On patience

Patience serves as a protection against wrongs as clothes do against cold. For if you put on more clothes as the cold increases, it will have no power to hurt you. So in like manner you must grow in patience when you meet with great wrongs, and they will then be powerless to vex your mind.

— Leonardo da Vinci

Do not trust all men, but trust men of worth; the former course is silly, the latter a mark of prudence.

— Democritus

I used to think of all the billions of people in the world, and of all those people, how was I going to meet the right ones? The right ones to be my friends, the right one to be my husband. Now I just believe you meet the people you're supposed to meet.

— Diane Frolov and Andrew Schneider, Northern Exposure, The Quest, 1995

Did You Know?

Halloween used to be called All Hallows' Eve. All Hallow's Day, also known as All Saints day, was a Christian festival. It was a day to remember the dead, especially saints. This is where Halloween came from - it was originally All Hallows' Eve (the day before All Hallow's Day). This then turned into Hallowe'en and is now just known as Halloween.

How acupuncture works

More people in the mainstream are turning to alternative health therapies, and one of the most popular alternative therapies is acupuncture. For instance, St. Vincent's Hospital in Manhattan, a health care organization that serves nearly 600,000 patients each year, and The Chinese Medical Science Foundation, a non-profit organization whose mission is to integrate acupuncture with the Western medical system, have paired to provide acupuncture to rehabilitation patients. St. Vincent's rehab patients will now have access to free acupuncture treatments through the pro-gram, according to a news story on Acupuncture.com. The purpose of the program is to study and assess the benefits and problems with integrating acupuncture into a Western medical facility.

The National Health Institute's National Center for Complementary and Alternative medicine says that acupuncture originated in China more than 2,000 years ago and is one of the oldest and most common medical procedures in existence. A 2002 survey found that an estimated 8.2 million U.S. adults had ever used acupuncture, and 2.1 million U.S. adults used acupuncture in 2001.

And so with the growing popularity of acupuncture, many people may be asking the question: Just what is acupuncture and how does it work? According to The Longevity Center of Classical Chinese Medicine, this is how acupuncture works:

It strengthens the immune system by increasing T-cell counts. Some people believe this is why the treatment is effective for those who suffer from chronic fatigue syndrome.

It releases pain-killing endorphins, which also play a big role in the functioning of the hormonal system. This is why acupuncture often works well for those who suffer from back pain, arthritis, ulcers and PMS.

It releases endorphins, which helps the whole body to relax. The endorphins also regulate serotonin in the brain, which can affect moods, and which is why some forms of depression are treatable by acupuncture.

It breaks the cycles of muscle spasm, which can cause tightness in the muscles and unrelenting pain. Acupuncture increases circulation to the affected areas, which delivers needed nutrients for nerve and muscle healing.

It balances the energy of our bodies.

Acupuncture needles are as thin as human hair and once inserted are left in for an average of 20 to 40 minutes. Acupuncturists should use packaged sets of disposable needles.

Average treatments can run from one to 10 visits.

Acupuncture has no known side effects and does not usually cause pain.

To choose a qualified acupuncturist, you should check his or her credentials. Some national acupuncture organizations make lists available on their Web sites.

On mood

Never do anything when you are in a temper, for you will do everything wrong.

Late to work? This solution's a real pill

John was always late to work. His boss was getting fed up, but John told him that he didn't know why, but he just couldn't seem to get up on time to get to work. The boss was an understanding man and suggested that John see his doctor to find out if there was some kind of physical problem.

So John went to the doctor and told him that no matter what he couldn't seem to get up on time for work. The doctor gave him a pill and told him to take it before he went to bed. So John went home and took the pill.

When John woke up he noticed that he was two hours ahead of schedule. He felt great, so he got up showered and arrived at work well before starting time.

"Boss," he said, "that pill that the doctor prescribed for me actually worked."

"That's great," said the boss, "but where were you yesterday?" — adapted from AhaJokes.com

Thoughts alone can control movement of external devices

A new brain sensor has allowed a quadriplegic to open a prosthetic hand, control a robotic limb and move a computer cursor—using only thoughts to accomplish the tasks. The man could open e-mail, play a game of Pong and adjust the volume of his television set—using thoughts only. The findings were recently published in the journal Nature.

The article reports on the trial of a device called BrainGate, a brain-to-movement system created and tested by Cyberkinetics Neurotechnology Systems. Brown University created the company based on the research of neuroscientist John Donoghue.

BrainGate is made up of a surgically implanted sensor that records the activity of dozens of brain cells. The system then decodes and reads the signals to control external devices.

Leigh Hochberg, lead author of the study, says, “We found that cortical activity can be modulated voluntarily even years after spinal cord injury. Some researchers might have predicted that this part of the brain would alter its function dramatically after the spinal cord was injured. But that doesn’t seem to be the case. The movement related signals are still there.

“What’s truly exciting about this: The cortical activity of a person with spinal cord injury, controlling a device simply by intending to move his own hand, is similar to the brain activity seen during preclinical studies of monkeys actually using their hands. Whether it is real or attempted movement, neurons seem to respond with similar firing patterns.”

Trial users were able to move a computer cursor using their thoughts only with 75 percent to 85 percent accuracy over the course of many sessions.

Researchers also say that when asked to “think left” or “think right” patients were able to change their neural activity immediately. And they were also able to multitask. They could hold a conversation and continue controlling their computer cursor, just as anyone can talk and work on the computer simultaneously.

‘Time’ is the most used noun

The folks at the Oxford English Dictionary say that “time” is the most used noun in the English Language, according to an Associated Press story. Other nouns that made the Top 25 most used words that were time related were “year,” in third place, “day” in fifth place, and “week” coming in at No. 17.

The most commonly used word of all: “the.” It’s followed by “be,” “to,” “of,” and, “a,” “in,” “that,” “have,” and “I,” according to the Concise Oxford English Dictionary.

Here’s a list of the Top 25 nouns: time, person, ear, way, day, thing, man, word, life, hand, part, child, eye, woman, place, work, week, case, point, government, company, number, group, problem, fact.
