Adopt a Dog Month. Sponsored by the American Humane Association, which notes that each year, 3 million to 4 million animals wait in shelters for someone to give them a safe, loving home.

Country Music Month. In 1977, President Jimmy Carter named October Country Music Month, proclaiming, “Country music is as universal as a sunset and as personal as a baby’s smile.”

Italian American Heritage Month. Celebrating the contributions of Italian Americans to the USA, whose ranks include such names as artist Robert De Niro Sr., vintner Robert Mondavi, music star Lady Gaga, and many others.

National Cyber Security Awareness Month. We depend on the Internet and the critical infrastructure and digital technology that operates it, making cyber security one of our country’s most important national security priorities and a shared responsibility.

Road warriors: Reach your destination intact

Staying safe on the road, whether you drive on the job or just to and from work, takes a combination of caution and preparation. You can avoid accidents and injury by following this simple advice:

• Keep your vehicle in good repair. Pay attention to the basics: Clean your windows and mirrors and check them for cracks; make sure your wipers and brakes work; check the air pressure in your tires, and so forth. Take your car in for a tuneup on schedule.

• Limit distractions while driving. Does anyone really need to be told that talking or texting on your phone is dangerous behind the wheel? Even a conversation with a passenger can steal your attention. Make an effort to keep your eyes and mind on the road at all times while you're in motion.

• Watch the weather. Monitor weather forecasts. No matter how urgently you need to get somewhere, driving through heavy rain or snow can be needlessly hazardous. Drive at a safe speed for weather conditions, and don't hesitate to pull over if the road isn't safe.

• Get enough rest. You need to be alert when driving, and getting into a car while drowsy or fatigued won't help your concentration. Schedule sufficient sleep and rest for yourself. If you start nodding off or you can't keep your eyes on the road, stop as soon as possible and find a safe place to get some rest.

• Drive defensively. Keep an eye on other cars, and don't try to be king of the road. Maintain a safe distance from other vehicles, watch for trouble spots, steer clear of erratic drivers and speeders, and focus on reaching your destination safely, even if you're a few minutes late.

10 Benefits of Growing An Herb Garden

By Elissa Rodrigues, Community Media Staff Writer

My Grandmother was an excellent gardener. You name it, she could grow it - from gorgeous roses (several varieties) to blueberries, tomatoes, peppers, zucchini, she even had an apple tree! Unfortunately, unlike her, my thumb happens to be more brown than green. This Spring, however, I'm giving it another try. I'm a Realist, so instead of growing an entire salad, I'm starting with an herb garden. Here are 10 benefits that may convince you to do the same!

1. Fresh herbs are always available. This may seem obvious, but you'll be surprised how creative you'll get with everyday vegetables, dips and dishes when you have fresh ingredients at your fingertips.
2. It's good for you. Adding fresh herbs boots vitamins and nutrients to your diet, and don't forget that gardening is a great calorie-burner with all that digging, bending and stretching. Talk about a double-benefit!
3. Save money. Fresh herbs can be expensive and wasteful when you buy a whole bundle, and only use a few snips for a recipe. Not to mention, stores may not always have the variety you're looking for, and specialty stores mean higher prices.
4. Educational. Growing an herb garden is a learning experience for adults and children, and kids will love to help out! From a new gardening technique to trying out new recipes, you'll be surprised how much you'll learn.
5. No boring dinners. Add a few new herbs to chicken, fish, potatoes, vegetables - or your regular party dip, and it goes from bland to wow, and you can experiment with new combinations nightly.
6. Relieve stress. Tending to or just visiting an herb garden - and breathing in all that aroma - can do wonders for stress levels. So make yourself a cup of (fresh) mint tea, and relax!
7. Share the wealth. Having your own herb garden means you'll have more than enough, so be a good neighbor (and friend), and share your bounty with others! Tie on a recipe to a fresh bunch, or jar your own dried herbs and voila you've got the perfect hostess gift.
8. Exotic variety. There are 30 varieties of basil. Who knew? Your regular grocer only carries the most common sweet basil. Choose your own exotic variety, whether it's dark opal basil, cinnamon basil, anise basil, Italian basil, or globe basil to name a few.
9. Curb appeal. Adding an herb garden can give your landscape real curb appeal - it's lush and well tended-to. If you don't have room for a full herb garden, just add them to shrubs. They blend in beautifully.
10. Good, clean fun. Dirt aside, it'll brighten your day to watch your fresh garden grow, and it may inspire you to branch out to fruits or vegetables. With all those herbs, you know you'll have the salad dressing covered!

For some flavor inspiration, some herbs to try are: basil, bay leaf, chives, dill, garlic, parsley, sage and mint (which makes delicious tea by the way!) Be creative, and plant what you'll use. For more tips, visit <http://www.gardeningknowhow.com>. Happy gardening!

Avoiding Seasonal Illness

Fall brings about cooler weather. Riding on the coat tails of seasonal changes are some nasty germs that can cause mild to severe colds and flu in people of all ages. Seniors are especially at risk.

The flu vaccination is highly recommended for seniors to prevent contracting that virus. Even after vaccination some people may get the flu, though symptoms are not as severe as they can be without the vaccine. While there is no vaccination for the common cold, there are ways to decrease your chances of catching colds as well as the flu by educating yourself on prevention methods and practicing due diligence when putting your knowledge to work.

The most important factor in preventing and battling bacteria and viruses is to wash your hands frequently. The Centers for Disease Control advises washing hands for 20 seconds longer than you normally do, with warm, soapy water.

It is also important to maintain a healthy immune system. A diet containing whole grains, fresh fruits and vegetables is key. Physicians may recommend vitamin supplements to keep the immune system healthy. Foods that help boost your immune system contain high levels of vitamin C, which produces antibodies that fight infection. Include choices such as red, yellow, and green peppers, pineapples, oranges and kiwis in your daily diet.

Sleep is critical to maintain vital immune systems. Experts recommend 7-8 hours of sleep per night for optimum results. Indulge in daily naps to give your body the quality time it needs to rejuvenate.

Fluid consumption keeps the mucous membranes in your nose and lungs hydrated, which deters germs from becoming active in those places. Vitamin A can help maintain moisture of the mucous membranes in your nose and mouth, as they are often the first line of defense against infection.

Putting these methods into practice in your daily life can help you maintain overall good health and hopefully limit your susceptibility to seasonal illnesses.

We can judge our progress by the courage of our questions and the depth of our answers, our willingness to embrace what is true rather than what feels good.

—Carl Sagan

Creativity

Imagination exercise: Think like a child

Want to become more creative? Try thinking like a young child. An experiment at North Dakota State University (and recounted on the Ideas to Go website) took two groups of adult graduate students and asked a simple question: “If school was canceled for the day, what would you do? Where would you go? Who would you visit?”

But one group was given one additional piece of guidance: “Pretend you’re 7 years old.” Both groups had 10 minutes to write down their answers, and then were given a series of creativity tests. The group that had been instructed to think like 7-year-olds exhibited higher degrees of creative thinking than the “adults.”

So whenever you’re looking for innovative solutions, try lowering your mental age a bit. The results might be exciting.

Try these three tips to improve imagination

Creative ideas don’t come from nowhere. You’ve got to actively seek them out, not wait for some muse to strike you with inspiration. Here are a few tips for sparking your imagination when you need to solve a problem or develop something new:

- Think when you’re tired. When you’re tired, your inhibitions and inner censor aren’t as powerful, and you may generate something unexpected. Instead of tackling problems first thing in the morning when you’re fresh, let your mind roam later in the day when you’re feeling a little fatigued.
- Get some exercise. In addition to contributing to your physical well-being, exercise can stimulate your creativity by helping your mental health. In experiments, participants who work out to exercise videos tend to come up with more ideas and solutions to problems than counterparts who merely watch the same videos.
- Have a little noise. While silence is best for detail-oriented tasks, a little ambient noise like music or the bustling of a coffee shop has been shown to enhance creative thought. Don’t play loud heavy metal or work next to a construction site, but set up an environment where some quiet activity around you will spark your mental muscles.

An investment in science may produce an invention. But if it doesn’t solve a problem, it won’t become an innovation that changes the world.

—Barry Jaruzelski

Anecdotes

Finders, keepers

A beggar found a leather pouch on the ground in the marketplace. He opened it up and found that it contained 100 pieces of gold.

Suddenly he heard a merchant shout: “My purse is gone! A reward to the person who finds my leather pouch!”

The beggar was an honest man, so he rushed to the merchant and held out the purse. “Here you are, sir,” he said, bowing low. “May I have my reward now?”

The merchant opened the pouch and quickly counted the coins. “Wait a minute—my pouch had 200 gold coins in it! You’ve stolen half my money and now you expect a reward?”

The police came up, and the beggar asked to be heard by a judge.

The judge listened to the case. After both sides were finished, he gave his ruling: “The merchant does not have to pay a reward.”

“Thank you, your honor.” The merchant smiled.

The beggar cried out, “But your honor—”

“I’m not finished.” The judge continued: “The reason you don’t have to pay a reward is because you stated clearly that your pouch had 200 gold coins in it. The pouch found by this beggar held only 100 coins. Therefore, this is not the pouch that you lost, and it is for the beggar to keep.”

Starting place

A man arrived in a new city for work. He wasn’t too sure if he’d be happy living there. One day he met a fellow in a bar and asked about life in the city.

“Oh, this is a great place,” said his new friend. “When I came here I couldn’t speak a single word of the language. I had no job and no food. Two people gave me a place to live and food and helped me out. Now, as you can see, I am strong and well-fed, I speak the language, and I have a great job here.”

“That’s fantastic! When did you come here?”

“Oh,” the man said, “I was born here.”

A guilty face?

A farmer went to cut some firewood for his stove one morning and discovered that his ax was missing. As he was searching, he noticed his neighbor’s son watching nearby.

“Aha,” the farmer thought. “He must have stolen my ax. I can see a guilty look on his face.”

But he had no proof, so he went inside and ate his breakfast cold. Later in the day as he walked past the woodpile, he noticed the ax underneath a few logs that had fallen over it during the night. Overjoyed, he picked it up and went to work chopping wood.

Then he spotted the neighbor’s son again, right where he’d been before, with the same expression on his face.

“That’s odd,” the farmer thought. “Somehow he lost that guilty look he had.”

The sound of anger

A young student of Zen visited a wise and renowned master. Wanting to show off his enlightenment, he sat down and said: “The mind does not exist. The true nature of the universe is emptiness. There is no realization, no delusion, no sage, no mediocrity. There is nothing to give and nothing to be received. Is this not right, master?”

The master, smoking quietly, said nothing. Suddenly he gave the student a smack on the head with his pipe.

The student grew quite angry. “Why did you do that? I came here seeking to discuss wise matters with you, and you simply hit me in the face with your pipe? How could you do such a thing?”

“If the mind does not exist,” the master asked, “where did this anger come from?”

When you find your path, you must not be afraid. You need to have sufficient courage to make mistakes. Disappointment, defeat, and despair are the tools God uses to show us the way.

Expand Your World With Social Media: 5 Tips

By: Elissa Rodrigues, Monthly Media Staff Writer

When was the last time you received a handwritten letter in the mail? For most it's a dying or lost form of communication, although nearly everyone I know still loves to receive personal pieces of mail. In the evolution of modern communication, handwritten letters evolved to electronic mail - or email, and now social media forms like Facebook and Twitter are quickly taking over. However, many don't understand their benefits, or the technology, and are cautious about getting onboard.

So the question is, has the social media bug bit you? Maybe you don't understand what all the fuss is about or maybe you've just dabbled in it. Email is still the # 1 online activity for baby boomers, those born between 1946-1964, according to The Pew Internet & American Life Project. It also reports, however, that 51% of baby boomers aged 50-64 and 33% of seniors over the age of 65 are now using social networking sites. "For the majority, social networking sites are most important as a way to share and communicate with friends and family who are already key social ties," said Pew senior research specialist Aaron Smith. Pew also reported that "People ages 50-64 were more likely to use social networking sites to connect to others with a common hobby or interest."

Love making model trains or looking for a local wheel throwing pottery group? You could connect with similar groups on a social media site like Facebook, and even learn when they're meeting up next. Or "Like" your favorite retail store or restaurant and receive Facebook Fan-only specials and coupons.

As intrigued as they are, many older adults like Deborah, a 64-year-old grandmother, simply feel that they don't belong on a site like Facebook because they don't have anything to contribute. "I don't do enough interesting things to post constant updates. Why would people care?" she said. She's already started and closed a Facebook account once, but was coaxed back onto the social networking site by her adult children. They explained that it's an excellent way to keep up with their lives and see photos of her grandchildren, so Deborah's giving it another try.

Many people are simply hesitant to try a new technology or worry about posting too much information online, however social media can be a fantastic way to both rekindle lost friendships and keep in touch with current ones. If you do decide to give social media, like Facebook or Twitter a try here are five safety tips from Sileo, an identity theft prevention company (www.sileo.com/facebook-safety):

1. If they're not your friend, don't pretend - Don't accept friend requests unless you absolutely know who they are and would associate with them in person.

Happy Halloween!

2. Post only what you want made public - Never post your personal address or home phone number. Even "About Me" information such as the city you live in, where you work and your personal email address are totally optional.
3. Manage your privacy settings - Facebook actually does a good job of explaining how to lock your privacy down, even if they don't have the most secure default settings. Read their guide here: <http://www.facebook.com/policy.php>
4. Don't Overshare - Be cautious about what personal information you post on any social media site. Going to Hawaii for three weeks? Awesome, but instead of notifying a large chunk of people you'll be gone, why not share the photos on Facebook once you return.
5. Don't unthinkingly respond to friends in distress - This goes for email as well - if you ever receive a post requesting money to help out a friend, do the smart thing and call them in person. As with all matters of identity, verify the source.

Besides keeping up with friends and family, social media also can expand your social world by connecting you to new ideas, cultures and people. You're no longer limited by geographic regions or boundaries - engage in conversations with people across the globe, without limitations. You can be as active on the site as you want to. Only interested in messaging with friends and looking at your grandkid's photos, no problem! It's totally up to you. So go ahead, start making some connections and explore - the best part is you can do it in your pajamas.

Disappearing planet? Not exactly a mystery

The first planet discovered in the so-called “Goldilocks Zone,” an orbit that’s neither too hot nor too cold to support life, may not be so special after all. In fact, according to the Popular Science website, it may not even exist.

In 2010, astronomers announced that Gliese 581g, 20 light years from Earth, was a candidate for further study in hopes of finding evidence of extraterrestrial life. Now, they’re saying that the “planet” may have been a sunspot all along. Since astronomers can’t spot individual worlds at such vast distances directly, they rely on observations of a star’s illumination. A recent review of the data taking into account new information about how fast the Gliese star spins found that the original evidence of a new world was no longer valid, along with signs of a second potential habitable planet.

Three other planets in the system have been confirmed as real, though, and scientists say that most of the other 977 exoplanets tracked by the Kepler Space Telescope are still out there.

Odds & Ends

Believe it or not? We’re going with ‘not’

History is full of practical jokers, some more successful than others. Check out these three tales of hoaxes that seemed plausible—before they fell apart:

- I’ll take Manhattan. A carpenter by the name of Lozier claimed in 1825 that Manhattan was in danger of sinking because of overbuilding on the lower end. Lozier proposed that the lower end be sawed off, dragged into New York harbor, and then reattached. He came up with a plan and commissioned numerous laborers. When the day came for the big move, the laborers gathered with supplies and provisions. Lozier never showed up.
- Not so elementary. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle created the famous detective Sherlock Holmes, but his own deductive powers weren’t always superior to anyone else’s. Two young girls, 16 and 10, once sent him a picture of fairies supposedly photographed in the English village of Cottingley. Doyle brought them national attention. Photography experts declared there had been no touching up or manipulating of the picture. In the early 1980s, the two girls (now grown women) had admitted that they had posed with paper cutouts of fairies, which had been supported by hatpins.
- Out of the Stone Age. In 1971, the world was told that a tribe of Stone Age people, never exposed to modern civilization, was found deep in the jungles of the Philippines. There was great hubbub about the discovery. Then in 1986, a Swiss journalist revisited the tribe, only to find them living in huts and dressed in T-shirts and shorts. The group of people then revealed that they had been instructed by a government official to pretend they were cave dwellers.
